Doha: Qatar Airways has announced its plans to serve over 140 destinations across the globe with a total of 1,200 weekly frequencies this summer.

The airline is gradually rebuilding its global network following the coronavirus pandemic, reaching 120 destinations in January. The number of destinations in the carrier's network will rise to over 140 by the peak of the summer 2021 season. In 2019, Qatar Airways was flying to around 160 destinations in the peak season.

The airline says it will serve 23 destinations in Africa, 14 in the Americas, 43 in Asia-Pacific, 43 in Europe, and 19 in the Middle East this summer.

Qatar Airways recently became the first airline in the Middle East to trial the IATA Travel Pass digital health passport app, enabling passengers to receive Covid-19 test results and verify they are eligible to undertake their journey through an 'OK to Travel' status.

On this note, Akbar Al Baker, Group Chief executive, Qatar Airways, said, "Having never stopped flying throughout the pandemic, we have used our unrivaled experience and modern, fuel-efficient fleet to operate a sustainable and reliable network our passengers, trade partners and corporate customers can rely on. We also continue to offer the largest international network, including launching seven new destinations, to provide the connectivity our passengers and cargo customers need.”

In Africa by summer 2021, the airline will fly to Abuja (ABV), Accra (ACC), Addis Ababa (ADD), Alexandria (HBE), Algiers (ALG), Cairo (CAI), Cape Town (CPT), Casablanca (CMN), Dar Es Salaam (DAR), Djibouti (JIB), Durban (DUR), Entebbe (EBB), Johannesburg (JNB), Kigali (KGL), Kilimanjaro (JRO), Lagos (LOS), Luanda (LAD), Maputo (MPM), Mogadishu (MGQ), Nairobi (NBO), Seychelles (SEZ), Tunis (TUN), and Zanzibar (ZNZ).
